

Enrolments & Applications

Help Documentation

Updated: October 2020

Why is this report useful?

This report is extremely useful for exporting enrolment or application data at an extremely specific level of granularity. It can provide answers to important questions on an ad hoc basis:

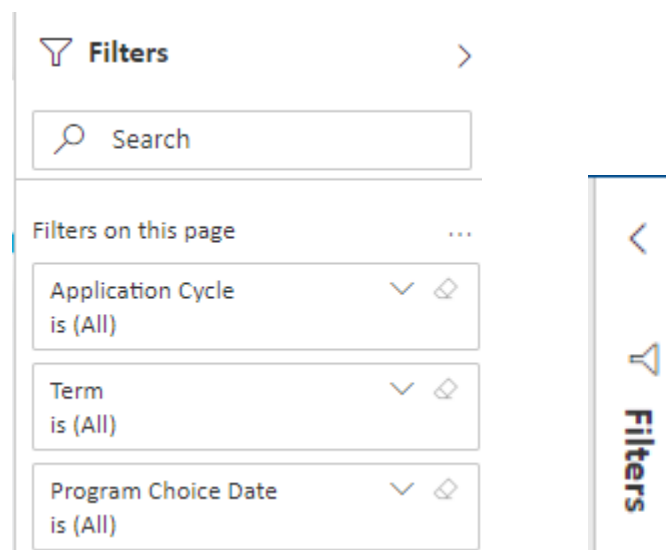

- How well is the college doing at attracting applicants of a certain age, gender, etc.?
- How many applications is the college receiving from a specific area/high school?
- Should we market more to applicants who are applying to certain programs or branch out?
- Should we open more spots for a specific program?
- What is the market demand for programs that are popular?

How to use this report

Both pages of this report feature static columns of data that are affected by filters. Many filters have been provided to slice the dataset to the desired level of granularity based on programs, demographics, regional data, and more.

Report Filters

This report has multiple filters available in a collapsible side panel (right side of the report). If filters are not visible, click Filters or the arrow icon (right side of the report).

Filter changes/updates will only be applied to the page the user is currently viewing. If a filter is selected, it is highlighted gray. The available filters differ slightly between pages:

College Applications Page

The second page of the report displays the application counts by college and program based on the number of program choices (as determined by the set applications cycles, terms and/or dates). Program choices are based on active choices—those that are active on the as of date (if the cycle has not yet ended) or at the end of cycle date. This page also allows you to drill down to investigate application counts based on specific colleges, programs and applicant demographics.
